

SolarTech Power Solutions

Lithium battery pack judgment

Overview

SUMMARY: Notice is hereby given that the U.S. International Trade Commission has determined to affirm the presiding administrative law judge's ("ALJ's") initial determination ("ID") (Order No. 34) finding a violation of section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, in this.

SUMMARY: Notice is hereby given that the U.S. International Trade Commission has determined to affirm the presiding administrative law judge's ("ALJ's") initial determination ("ID") (Order No. 34) finding a violation of section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, in this.

James Ethridge brought a personal injury lawsuit against Samsung SDI Company, which manufactured a battery that exploded in his pocket. The district court dismissed his complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction because the Fourteenth Amendment's conceptions of fair play and substantial justice.

James Ethridge, a Texas resident, purchased a Samsung 18650 lithium-ion battery from a Wyoming-based seller on Amazon in October 2018. The battery exploded in his pocket in November 2019, causing severe burns and other injuries. Ethridge filed a personal injury lawsuit in Texas state court in 2021.

On April 1, 2025, Shenzhen Fbtech Electronics Ltd. petitioned for inter partes review of U.S. Patents 9,954,207 ("the '207 patent") and 9,412,994 ("the '994 patent"). Shenzhen Fbtech Elecs Ltd. v. LithiumHub, LLC, IPR2025-00822, Paper 1 (PTAB April 1, 2025); Shenzhen Fbtech Elecs Ltd. v.

Li-ion batteries are commonly used in electric vehicles, consumer electronics, power tools, and medical devices. They provide higher energy density and efficiency compared to alkaline batteries and are uniquely positioned to overtake a growing electronic consumer market, in no small part because of.

SUMMARY: Notice is hereby given that the U.S. International Trade Commission has determined to affirm the presiding administrative law judge's ("ALJ's") initial determination ("ID") (Order No. 34) finding a violation of section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, in this investigation and.

October 25, 2023 (San Francisco, CA) - Hawkins Parnell & Young, LLP, obtained a federal appellate decision affirming the dismissal of their client, an international electronics manufacturer, after oral argument before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Partner Robert Gilbreath, chair of the firm's.

Lithium battery pack judgment

Contact Us

For catalog requests, pricing, or partnerships, please visit:
<https://zegrzynek.pl>